CLAUDIA SANDOVAL

More than ever, my heart is on art

This multidisciplinary designer and visual artist was born in 1971 in Concepcion, Chile. Always interested in constructing things, as a kid she was fascinated with tree houses and the challenges behind building them. An active kid, very good at school, she became more aware of her creative passion playing outdoors in the farm where she grew up.

In 1994 she received a BFA in Design from PUC of Chile. During the 90's she met key people in her design education, such as Sheena Calvert and David Carson, which developed on her a new perspective about graphic design and visual communication.

In 2005 she founded Art Battery Group with her husband Alfonso Nieto. Since then, their creative collaboration has grown up and developed a new creative path for both, as team and artists.

The Art Battery Group creative director has the belief that art can be explored as a collaborative endeavor and since the beginning of her career as designer she has been developing ways to connect artists to work together. In 2008 she discovered video as a new medium to work with and also she has founded on October of that year, along with Andrea Lira and Victor Ruano, a video art collective called Unclassified Time, which is based in New York, NY. She also worked as creative director at Artplugsdesign, her lovely design studio. Feel free to contact her for solid ideas translated into compelling visual stories.

She works and lives in Brooklyn, NY.
